

‘Preaching in a Post-Truth World’: A Bold Call to Proclaim Truth in a Culture of Chaos

BRENTWOOD, Tenn., May 1, 2025 —In a society increasingly skeptical of truth, how can pastors effectively preach the Gospel?

In his new book, ‘Preaching in a Post-Truth World’ by B&H Publishing, author Mike Glenn delivers a compelling and timely resource for pastors and ministry leaders seeking to boldly proclaim God’s Word with conviction, clarity and compassion.

With more than forty years of pastoral experience, including his tenure as senior pastor of Brentwood Baptist Church in Brentwood, Tenn.,—one of the largest churches in America—Glenn brings wisdom and practical insight to the challenges of preaching in a post-modern, post-religious, post-truth culture.

‘Preaching in a Post-Truth World’ encourages pastors to stay firmly rooted in the timeless message of the Gospel, as they navigate cultural changes with clarity and unshakable conviction.

Possible Interview Questions

- How have you seen preaching change over the past three decades of your ministry?
- What does the term “post-truth” mean to you, especially in the context of the church?
- We live in an age where words are often thrown around like discarded plastic. How can pastors reclaim the power of words in their preaching?
- How should pastors respond to a culture that's skeptical—if not outright hostile—toward absolute truth?
- What does it look like for a pastor to “recenter the pulpit”?
- You describe society as post-modern, post-religion, even post-everything. How do these cultural shifts affect the way the Gospel is received?
